Bruck a/d Leitha - Kaisersteinbruch - Jois

- A restricted region around a maneuver area and training ground for Katyusha rocket weapons. The last maneuvers were held here on 10 January 1947.
- The 300 meter-high area from Bruckberg to Joiser-Platte on Neusiedler See was completely closed off during the maneuvers, presumably because it is high enough to provide a clear view of the maneuver ground.
- All civilians have been evacuated from the village of Kaisersteinbruch; the barracks are filled with troops.

Ostendorf

East of the town there is a large repair shop in conjunction with a motor pool which source estimates contains several hundred cars and trucks. [REDACTED]

Comment: This is possibly a motor pool for units of the 2nd Guards Air Arm.

Gspitz

Twelve railroad carloads of artillery ammunition were unloaded by trucks of the 1st Guards Artillery Division on 13 January 1947. License numbers were E O 27 XI and E O 29 XI.

Allentsteig

There is a shop here that makes Russian reprints of Germany Army maps of Hungary, Carpatho-Ukraine, Bulgaria, Greece, Turkey, etc. Maps printed here are distributed to units both in this and other areas. At present the shop is turning out large quantity of sheets of secret German General Staff maps of Eastern Europe, 1944 edition. 1:300,000, sheets V 41 and 42, W 41 and 42. These sheets cover the area of Istanbul and the Bosphorus.

License Numbers

- Observed on the Bruck-Vienna road were several cars and trucks of the F 1 65 IX series (identified as belonging to the 13th Guards Motor Mechanized Division), two of which were American 6 x 6 Studebaker chassis mounting covered rocket launchers. Source believes them to have been launchers for 8 cm rockets, as the rack did not look large enough for 13 cm rockets.
